As you know there is great public concern about the connection of the use of active sonar with damage to marine life. Today's event in Portsmouth City did not (for us) do answer a lot of those questions. Too often answers were along the line, "this is being researched" or "this is just outside my personal expertise."

At least from a PR standpoint EIS was not satisfactory leaving us with an impression that available info was not honestly shared & thus with the suspicion that the info available may be detrimental to the Navy's proposal.
