11/19/2006 15:55	Edgerton	Allen					South Carolina		I believe great care should be exercised before beginning any active sonar testing along the Atlantic coast. Sonar can cause great harm including death to some species of whales and dolphins. A detailed plan followed by public debate should take place before initiating any tests. There is little need to rush the process and careful planning should be done to obviate any damage this testing may cause. Thank-you, Allen Edgerton
