11/15/2006 8:22	Griggs	Jerrold					South Carolina		The severe damage to marine wildlife that can be caused by naval sonar has been clearly documented. It is imperative then that the proposed testing plan be carefully thought out and presented to the public, before moving ahead with it, to protect the many whales, threatened mammals, and other species in the waters off the coast of South Carolina and elsewhere. I fear that this plan will permanently set back our wildlife--they cannot recover from hearing loss!
